The Mustard Seed.

On Coming Home...

On April 4th, 2021 (Easter Day), it was announced that as of June 1st, the Reverend Brennan McCurry would be the next Rector of the Killarney Group of Parishes (consisting of Holy Trinity, Killarney; St. Matthew's, Boissevain; Christ Church, Cartwright; and St. Andrew's, Deloraine.)

Fr. Brennan is no stranger to this diocese, having grown up here. He received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Brandon University, and then went and completed his Master of Divinity degree at Huron University College at the University of Western Ontario.

The Mustard Seed reached out to Fr. Brennan with a few questions.

MK+: You grew up in the diocese. What kind of things did you do while you were here?

BMc+: I grew up in the Diocese of Brandon attending St. George's Brandon parish. Throughout my life I have been involved with the Camp (AMC) both as a camper, a volunteer, and as staff. Before moving to London Ontario to attend Huron University College I was a volunteer on the Diocesan Refugee Committee, the Camp Committee, and was a youth delegate to diocesan synod.

MK+: Is there anything that excites you about coming to Brandon as a priest?

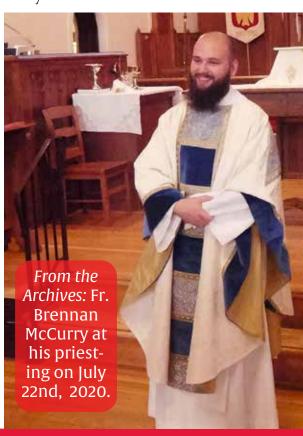

BMc+: There are a number of things I am excited about returning to work in the diocese of Brandon. A few that come to mind include: The robust lay leadership within the diocese represented both within a liturgical context and outside of liturgy. The opportunity to work in a diocese with diverse parish organization, both multi-point and single point parishes and the blend of lay and ordained leadership within parishes that brings diverse viewpoints to the forefront of parish mission. As well, I am excited for the deep sense of community and comradery that a mainly rural diocese has, the small town culture of community and care permeates throughout the whole diocese.

MK+: Having grown up on the prairies and trained in southwestern Ontario, do you notice a discernible difference between the church in the Diocese of Brandon and the Diocese of Huron?

BMc+: In the past four years that I have spent in the diocese of Huron I have noticed a difference in the culture of the two diocese. The most discernible cultural difference that I have noticed while in Huron has been the sizing of the cities and towns. The difference between the small town and the city, the contrast of the speed of life.

Welcome home, Fr. Brennan. We're thrilled to have you back!

A Word From Our Bishop

The Rt. Rev'd William G. Cliff Bishop of Brandon

It is the Easter season, and we are celebrating the resurrection of the Lord and the conquering of death by Jesus the founder and perfecter of our faith. The resurrected life greets us as a surprise, Jesus calls us out of the dark and cool peace of the tomb; into a riot of colour and sound and blinding light of the rising sun. You are no longer dead. You have been resurrected and that means that you must now find what it is that God has resurrected you for.

I was raised in the church that was obsessed with whether or not one was "saved". It was a natural part of our language and I had understood clearly that I was saved from sin and death, so long as I kept to the straight and narrow road that I was always being warned about. However in all the years that I attended church, it was never made clear what I "saved" for! This question was a revelation.

It is not a matter of my being ungrateful for the fact that Christ has saved me. I have given my life and heart to the Lord and serve him daily, but that service has to take a shape in each of our lives, and that shape is the very thing we are saved "for". Perhaps you have been chosen by God to do justice in every day life by leading efforts to care for the poor or the hungry. Perhaps you have a sense that God is leading you to preach the gospel and want to lead in the church. It may be that you have a wish to teach the faith to those younger as they prepare for their confirmation. These three examples show what you could be saved for. It is also possible that you may be called to be an every day disciple of Jesus Christ in your ordinary life. Nothing heroic or special in the eyes of the world, but in the eyes of God, a saint and a citizen of the kingdom. Having been saved from sin and death, your discipleship and faithfulness may be what you are saved for.

The risen Jesus confronts me with a new life and this means that I have to look beyond the way I had always thought of myself, and what I had always thought about the world and my responsibility in proclaiming that new life. So....I'm risen with Jesus, and I have been given a new life. I have overcome sin and death and the grave because I have been buried with him in his death and I stand with him in the garden because I am raised with him to new life. Now what?

This is the question that faces us in the weeks that follow Easter. We celebrate on the day of the resurrection, but what about a few weeks later when the lilies have drooped and the brass is tarnishing again and the attendance at church as normalized after the Easter rush? Then the good news has to grab us in a new way. The choice to leave the garden tomb is the choice to explore the new life we have been given and the new world which love has made for us. It requires risk. The risk to love, to be loved, and even to be rejected, but it also means that we face whatever cross that follows firm in the knowledge that death is a temporary inconvenience in the kingdom. It only holds us for a bit, and then we are back to living and praising and preaching and caring and loving like we were before. Alleluia! Christ is risen! He is risen indeed! Alleluia! And SO ARE WE!

News from the Pews

ST. JOHN'S, RESTON

as submitted by Pat Forbes, Lay Reader

HIDDEN TREASURES, operated by St. John's Church volunteers has been in business for 5 years. The Ven. Don Bernhardt cut the red ribbon at our grand opening on April 21, 2016. Even though this was a new venture for us we had some twenty five plus years of experience holding semi annual thrift sales in the parish hall. When we opened the store we had some empty spaces on the shelves and we immediately unpacked every bag and box donation that came in the back door. We even had time to dust the shelves. Now we never are short of bags and boxes to unpack and very seldom are there empty spaces on the shelves. If there are we quickly find something to fill the space.

The store was closed for 3 ½ months during 2020 due to the Covid 19 restrictions. We could tell our supporters were busy cleaning out closets and cupboards during this time because the donations never stopped coming to the back door. When we were able to open just before Christmas the most often made comment we heard was "I am so glad you are open". We were glad to be open too. We missed all our friends. Over the 5 years our income has grown more than we expected. So not only have we managed to keep the doors open to our little church up the street but we have been able to make more than 20 monetary donations to groups and causes that needed a boost plus supply store items where needed in the community. This has been made possible by the wonderful

Easter from the Pews

While public worship in the Diocese of Brandon this past Easter didn't look like it did pre-pandemic, many churches throughout the diocese were able to gather in-person for worship on Easter, with COVID-19 protocols in place (such as masks on while singing and moving about the church, and being limited to 25% capacity.)

Even though it didn't look like Easter celebrations of the past, churches were able to decorate for this wonderful day in our Christian calendar. Below are some of the churches of the diocese that submitted photos!

From Strength to Strength: A Reflection on the Annunciation text & image submitted by the Rev'd Dr. Paul Shore Deacon Assistant, St. Matthew's Cathedral, Brandon

On March 24, the Feast of the Annunciation, in a guest sermon at St. Matthew's, Father Matt Koovisk (who was also celebrating the fourth anniversary of his ordination as deacon that day) pointed out that the Annunciation works like a "flashback" preceding the events of Holy Week, providing the backstory to act of transformative love that we recall at Easter. In the well known passage from Luke, Mary is visited by the angel Gabriel, who tells her of the Child she will bear.

The retelling of this story usually focuses on Mary's obedience, as expressed in in her words,"Let it be done according to Your will." We'd be off base, however to read this declaration as a sign of passivity or weakness. You can also hear resolve and strength in these words. When Leonardo da Vinci set out to paint this encounter, he gave us some hints on how to understand it. Mary is no plaster backyard saint here. She has been reading a book, and her hand still rests on its pages. His pose is one of calm and confidence, as she welcomes the mighty Archangel who, rather than striking an intimidating pose, kneels before her! This very young Mary (and she probably was a teenager) is queenly in her dignity, but not haughty. She has, as we would say today, a handle on the situation.

A (Short) Sermon on the Annunication

as preached (and transcribed) by the Editor

Note: This sermon was originally preached on March 24th, 2021 by me as I celebrated the Wednesday Eucharist at the Cathedral in thanksgiving for the four year anniversary of my ordination as a Deacon. It has been transcribed (and cleaned up a bit) for your reading pleasure. During the pandemic, I've recorded a sermon each week for the local radio station in Virden, and you can find them (along with the original recording of the sermon below) at http://www.anchor.fm/matt-koovisk.

Perhaps this sermon might be appropriate for this issue since the month of May is considered by some Christians to be the month devoted to the Blessed Virgin Mary, with Christians around the world participating in devotions to our Blessed Mother. The text for this sermon is Luke 1: 26-38.

One of the things that I've had to think about in the past year since this pandemic began is that I've had to think more about video production than I ever did when I was ordained a deacon four years ago. It would seem that movies and TV shows have become an even bigger part of our lives in this pandemic. One of the things hat people do when making movies and TV shows is that they use "flashbacks" to help move the story line along. As we celebrate the Feast of the Annunciation this day, I can't help but wonder if this device can't help us to understand this Feast in a new light. Let me explain.

We are about to enter into one of the most sacred weeks of the church year — Palm Sunday will be here very soon. I can't help but wonder the liturgical calendar is lining up this year to remind us as we enter into this Holy Week once more. In my high school video production class, I was taught that "flashbacks" are a good way to set the scene for the viewer. It might help us this day to look at the events of the Feast of the Annunciation as a flashback — especially as it falls so close to Holy Week, and we hear the story of Jesus' betrayal, trial, crucifixion and death. This day, we "flash back" to the events of the annuncement of the annunciation and hear the story about how it all began.

It all began in a spectacular way with the Archangel Gabriel coming to the Blessed Virgin Mary and saying "Greetings, favoured one, the Lord is with you." It began with the Archangel Gabriel reminding the Blessed Mother about what God will do – that she will bear a son. His name will be Jesus and he will be the Son of the Most High.

It is helpful for us to remember these things as we walk into the events of Holy Week, a week that is filled with betrayal, a week that is filled with darkness, a week where we walk into the valley of the shadow of death once more. As we remember the story of the annunciation, and as we walk into the events of Holy Week once more, let us remember the central truth that Mary says: "For nothing will be impossible with God."

My friends, let us take Mary's words to heart this day. Let us ponder them, let them sink into you and let them be a refrain for you as you enter into Holy Week, a week where it can be easy for us to be enveloped by darkness, just like the disciples were that first Holy Week. Let us remember that with God, nothing is impossible. Let us remember that while the darkness may come upon us, it is not the end of the story, for as our Blessed Mother reminds us day after day, nothing is impossible with God.

And for that, we give thanks, now and forevermore. Amen.

The Ladies Getaway "The Three In One: A Love Story" scheduled for June 2021

This event has been cancelled due to the COVID-19 pandemic. It is our hope to have it from June 10-12, 2022!
